STATEMENT OF AT – WILL EMPLOYMENT AGREEMENT STATUS

This agreement shall commence on the date hereof, and shall continue at the will of the Employer and the Employee. Employer and Employee mutually agree to give reasonable notice of their decisions to terminate the employment provision of this agreement. One pay period notice shall always be considered as reasonable notice unless termination is for cause. Termination for cause does not require notice. Notice may be given orally but in writing is preferred. The parties agree that this agreement is, at any time at the election of either party an "at will" agreement and may be terminated, subject to the notice provisions set forth above, with or without cause, at any time whatsoever. The "at will" provisions of this agreement supercede anything to the contrary in any other agreement between Company and Employee. Nothing in the Company handbook, manual, or similar document shall be construed as superceding the "at will" provisions of this agreement. A fully executed writing between Company and Employee may only alter the "at-will" provisions of this agreement; oral statements or promises shall not be effective to alter the "at will" provisions of this agreement.
